Bio: Andrew Flinn is a Reader in Archival Studies and Oral History at University College London, UK and formerly archivist at the People’s History Museum in Manchester. He is the vice-chair of the UK Community Archives and Heritage Group, and researches on issues relating to participatory heritage practices and community-based archiving, including leading the UCL AHRC-funded Research for Community Heritage team Dig Where We Stand (2012-13). He has written widely on archives and heritage activism and participatory practice including ‘Archival activism. Independent and community-led archives, radical public history and the heritage professions’, InterActions 2011, (with Duff, Suurtamm, & Wallace) ‘Social justice impact of archives: a preliminary investigation’, Archival Science (2013) and (with Anna Sexton) ‘Research on community heritage: moving from collaborative research to participatory and co-designed research practice’ (Prato 2013).